Character Bios

Sister – The elder Alden sibling makes her peace with the constraints of propriety from the ivory tower of religion. Were she a man, she'd be taking the helm of the Alden family—instead, she is relegated to watching her brother squander the family legacy.

Brother – At an age to begin making his own fortune, the Alden family heir seems...distracted.

Maid – Working for the Alden family wasn't her first choice of employment, but maid to a new money family was better than nothing. Seeking temporary escape from the barely-restrained viciousness of her employer's daughter, she finds refuge—and perhaps more—in the kitchens of the house.

Cook –The current iteration in a long line of women attached to this kitchen and grounds, her skill as an herbalist and cook might have raised concerns of other practices in an earlier era. Fortunately, those living in the house are more than happy with the services they know she provides...and the ones they don't know can't hurt them.

Gardener – Family man with a green thumb, the Gardener is happy for his post on the estate. He's overseen many a garden and the one at Glen Foerd is particularly fine, if a tad overgrown. Nothing he cannot handle, though he'd prefer doing so without the close attention of some of the family.
